

More times that we like to admit, we have people call or visit us who have some kind of Hardrive data failure. From a full glass of white wine spilled over a Sony laptop, or to the plain old dreaded clicking sound of a failed hardrive - your data can be very important to you. Every client we talk with we try to emphasize - please Backup your data, all the time and have at least 2, 3 backup systems. Having all your data on one drive in one place is playing Russian Roulette.

Using special data recovery software we can locally try to resurrect your data. This is usually our first step, that is if the drive is actually spinning. If this route fails we have a few reputable data recovery companies in which we can ship your drive off to.
